6. Explanatory notes

- A. Owners of ships are required to hold public liability insurance to meet their potential liabilities under the Maritime Transport Act 1994.
- B. A certificate of insurance provides evidence/security that there is a contract of insurance or other financial security in place to cover the owner's potential liabilities for oil pollution damage and gives a direct right of action against the party providing the insurance or security.
- C. Marine Protection Rules Part 102: Certificates of Insurance, together with associated provisions in the Maritime Transport Act 1994, elaborates the requirement that owners of ships carrying more than 2,000 tonnes of persistent oil in bulk as cargo have certificates which verify the existence of public liability insurance sufficient to cover any claims for oil pollution damage arising from a marine oil spill. The requirement gives effect to provisions of the Protocol of 1992 to amend the International Convention on Civil Liability for Oil Pollution Damage (1969) to which New Zealand is party.

Part 102 also requires other ships of 400 gross tons or more to hold certificate of insurance for liability cover for oil pollution damage.
- D. For ships of over 1000 gross tonnes (GT) and ships over 2000 GT carrying oil in bulk as cargo, these requirements give effect to the Bunker Convention and 1992 Protocol to the International convention on Civil Liability for Oil Pollution Damage, 1969. This enables those ships travelling overseas to present certificates accepted in other countries. The requirements for ships between 400 and 1000 GT are a requirement of New Zealand domestic law.
- E. You need to provide evidence of the insurer's financial strength rating that is given by an approved rating agency, for example Standard and Poors or AM Best.
