6. Explanatory notes

Equivalent certificate to compass adjuster course completion certificate

The Director has determined that the following certificates may be considered equivalent to a compass adjuster's course completion certificate for the purposes of rule 45.35(1)(iii):

- a service certificate issued by a naval force other than New Zealand, such as Australia or the United Kingdom, indicating that the applicant has undergone training and passed an assessment in compass adjusting as part of specialist navigation training
- a certificate or licence as a compass adjuster issued by another maritime administration where the course and assessment requirements leading to the certificate or licence are equivalent to those required in New Zealand.

Evidence of adjustment of compasses

Acceptable evidence includes tables or certificates of deviations, with supporting calculations. The names of the commercial ships must be provided. The papers must be signed by the applicant and dated within the last 5 years.
